

MONDAY, September 1, 1986

DAILY NEWS
Business

"We want to be a long-term survivor . . ."

— William Jacobi, of Westinghouse, on nuclear waste biz

THE TICKER

Grueling times

Chinese babies can trade in their streaming bowls of rice gruel for processed baby cereal now that Heinz-United Food Enterprises opened a new plant in Canton.

Don't we all

Westinghouse Electric, which made 40 of the 101 nuke reactors in the U.S., is expanding its nuclear waste business. "We want to be a long-term survivor," said GM Bill Jacobi.

The real stuff?

Imexport, a Malaysian conglomerate, plans to make frozen Chinese foods in a upstate Radisson, N.Y.

Body double

Ferrari slapped a $5 million trademark suit on Alden-Thomas Motorcars of Oregon for making look-alike Ferrari GTO bodies that snap onto Pontiac Fiero chassis.